
Positive values indicate values above the three-site mean; standardization is descriptive and does not imply biological weighting.