
Each variable is independently standardized across the three sites. Positive values indicate relatively greater warming, population growth, land-use expansion, or forest loss. This is not a composite environmental-pressure index.